HOW TO: Build a team of professionals for your business

As a business owner, you probably handle most of the responsibility of running the business yourself. But what if you could utilize a team of professionals to consult and guide the management of your company? What if this team could understand your situations and needs on an ongoing basis?

No matter what type of business you own or how successful you are, everyone can benefit from the guidance and knowledge of these four key business specialists, many of whom are independent business operators just like you.

ATTORNEY: You may want to hire an attorney who specializes in the needs of business owners and can consult with you on asset ownership, best-choice business form, succession planning, contract review, and employee-employer relationships. It's crucial to establish a relationship with your attorney, so that you can pick up the phone when you have a question.

ACCOUNTANT: Again, you may prefer someone who understands the needs of independent business people and, if possible, also knows your industry. An accountant should help you "read" your books more effectively, translate raw data, plot areas of profit and loss, and show you how to manage your tax liability. In short, your CPA could save you money. Don't make the mistake of meeting only once a year at tax time: give your accountant the opportunity to work with you all year long.

FINANCIAL INSTITUTION OFFICER: Credit is the lifeblood of many businesses. It's always important to maintain contact with a person who can help you access the cash flow you need when you need it, and at a favorable rate. In addition to issuing credit, many financial institutions frequently provide a wealth of other services at minimal or no charge. Regular contact with your institution will keep you abreast of new opportunities that can benefit your business.

INSURANCE PROFESSIONAL: An insurance agent familiar with the challenges facing independent business owners can act as an effective problem solver. Specifically, a trained, licensed insurance professional can play several crucial roles in your business:

- 1) Help your company meet its immediate insurance protection needs. This includes helping select and fund insurance for key executive coverage, death and disability* buy-out, pension, and other qualified plans.
- 2) Help meet your personal insurance and financial product needs. Family decisions can be a key factor in making any business decisions. Your insurance agent can help you coordinate a cohesive insurance program that satisfies your needs and goals on personal and professional levels.
- 3) Help coordinate the work of other professionals. Insurance agents will help you focus on the big picture and work to help you put together a team of professionals.

FRANCHISING:

THE ALTERNATIVE METHOD OF BUSINESS OWNERSHIP

Most of us think franchising is just about fast food and coffee - it's not! Franchising is a proven method of distributing products and services utilizing local business owners. They are home based, office based, mobile, retail, and light manufacturing. They may specialize in business or residential services, education, senior care, coaching and consulting, staffing, automotive, health care, real estate and yes, fast food! Franchising has grown to be a $9 billion industry and accounts for more than 5 percent of the U.S. gross domestic product.

According to the Department of Commerce, franchises enjoy a much higher success rate than independent businesses. The franchise operating system has been developed and proven, providing significant training and support, by industry experts. A franchisee is in business for him/herself but not by himself. Franchisees do pay an initial franchise fee and there is a binding agreement. Research is the key. If you decide to look into franchising, we'll help you get all the facts up front.

Who do we work with? It is someone like you... A person escaping from corporate America, a current business owner looking to expand or add an additional revenue stream, someone who wants to keep their job and have a business on the side. Basically anyone who wants to become more self reliant and build financial security.

A franchise coach can be invaluable in helping you to determine the right business to invest in. They get to know their clients - Using testing and assessments to understand their strengths, weaknesses, business and transferable skills, and their income and lifestyle goals. Coaches also provide free education about business ownership. Franchise coaches with The Entrepreneur's Source offer their services at no charge. If you are thinking about business ownership, it's time to give franchising a closer look!

Ken Picard is a Business Coach and independent owner at The Entrepreneur's Source. He can be reached a (978) 562-8930 or kpicard@esourcecoach.com
